King Farouk Pops The Question And Tilts The Moslem Apple Cart

Cairo (AP) — King Farouk of Egypt just up and popped the question. And Farida Zulfikar, 16-year-old daughter of an Egyptian nobleman, said, "Yes."

Sound natural enough. But boy, oh boy, in Egypt that's news. And it's only the beginning.

What will Farida do about the veil, for instance. Will she wear it in public?

Look Out, Old Customs This betrothal bids fair to upset Moslem customs that are centuries old.

For example: In Egypt, until recently, a bridegroom never saw his fiancée until their wedding night. If a young man wanted to marry he approached a "khatibeh," a woman whose business it was to help men seeking brides. She visited families with daughters of a marriageable age, accompanied by the man's female relatives. Together they made their choice, and, if he approved — and he made his decision entirely on their description of his future wife — arrangements were made with the girl's parents for payments of the dowry.

This was money or property given to the girl's parents by the bridegroom in exchange for their daughter.

This custom is being dropped gradually among educated classes in Egypt, but it never was observed better than at the court of the late King Fuad, Farouk's father.

Fuad Was A Stickler Fuad was a stickler in such matters. Queen Nazli his widow, spent most of her life in the royal harem until Fuad died. On the rare occasions when she drove the streets of Cairo she was heavily veiled.

And now Egypt is wondering what Farida will do about the veil.

Farouk is known to have discussed the matter with Sheikh Moustapha el Maraghy, head of Azhar University and rector of all Moslems in Egypt. Sheikh Maraghy is progressive — recently he introduced courses in English and Japanese into his thousand-year-old university — but he is attached to certain traditions.

Changes Come Fast Farida, accustomed to short-skirted sports dresses and berets, will find a veil irksome if she has to wear one.

Farouk is in love with Farida. He takes her swimming and horseback riding, and together they play tennis and go on moonlight auto drives.

All this would have been impossible not so many months ago. But Farouk, as well as Farida, Farida Zulfikar She will be Queen of Egypt.

was educated on western lines. The young monarch had an English governess and European tutors. Farida went to a Catholic convent when she was eight and remained there until shortly before her engagement.

Farouk intends to bring court etiquette up-to-date. Only recently he gave a garden party for the princes and princesses of the Royal Family, and introduced Farida to them all.

In Fuad's day there would have been separate parties — one for men, the other for the women.

THE RECORD SPEAKS

Very frequently one hears the statement that now is the time to retrench and to seek security as far as possible for one's self. This advice is given on the theory that the day of reckoning will come sooner or later.

It is generally admitted that it is up to the individual to put his house in order and keep it there.
Now if this is good advice for the individual citizen, why isn't it good for the city government? The city is nothing more than an aggregate of individuals. Mayor Helselman has been the paid public servant of the people for the past four years. Has he kept the city's house in order? Let's look at the records.

They show that the three tax rates established by the Helselman administration are the lowest in 10 years, notwithstanding the large amounts appropriated in the budget for relief.

For three years, 1934 to 1936 inclusive, the city has finished each year with a surplus.

The city has been solvent and its bonds have been eagerly sought at all public bond sales by representatives of the leading bond houses of New York city. The bonds have been selling at interest rates which have touched a new low mark.

Additional public service includes modern equipment for the street department, adequate fire fighting apparatus, better health service, supervised play for children, improved street lighting, etc.

Taxpayers, irrespective of party affiliation, know this record and they are fully aware of the fact that Mayor Helselman has not squandered their money. They know that he has given a business administration that warrants his return to office.

Attempts, for political purposes, to besmirch the record, will meet the usual fate—dismal failure.

HOUSE FAMINE

There is an almost incredible lack of houses in this country today. Expected construction has not yet been realized. Present building doesn't seem even to be replacing homes no longer usable, and keeping up with growth of population, not to mention catching up on the building deficits of the last decade.

Figures presented at the meeting of the American Public Health Association in New York indicated that the housing deficiency is as bad now as it was in the worst period after the World War.
Prof. C. E. A. Winslow of Yale University says the country needs 6,000,000 new "low cost house units," to meet minimum needs for health and decency. Another expert calls for 3,775,000 new homes by 1941. Brookings Institution makes it 4,500,000. Ernest Kahn says there ought to be more than 9,000,000 new houses by 1945.

Along with the "low cost" homes, there should be hundreds of thousands of medium cost homes, and other more spacious and expensive for those who can afford them. In this one field alone, if the need were taken seriously and there were a concerted movement to meet it, there would be not only proper housing for 130,000,000 Americans, but the making of a new prosperity.

THE RUSSIAN VOTE

In recent years more and more eligible voters in the United States have been enticed to the polls on election days, although there are still too many indifferent citizens.
Politicians, reformers and good citizens generally may look toward Russia with wondering admiration because that country expects 90 per cent of the electorate to vote on December 12.

This remarkable feat is to be accomplished by the greatest effort to "get out the vote" that the world has ever seen. Already, writes Walter Duranty, there are hundreds of thousands of election and discussion centers throughout the country, and scores of thousands of agitators have been enrolled to speak.

If more than half the electors fail to vote, the new constitution provides that the election will be void and must be repeated within two weeks. Perhaps it is all as democratic as some of the expounders say. Anyway, it is certainly an interesting spectacle to watch from this side of the world.

TREATIES

Chancellor Hitler announced the other day that his government had concluded a non-aggression pact with Belgium, and this news was regarded in Berlin as "a reply to President Roosevelt's Chicago speech". That is, it was expected to prove the good faith of Nazi peace professions and shame the President for pointing, by implication, an accusing finger at Germany.

Such an event is interesting and pleasing, but not altogether conclusive. Germany before the World War was bound by treaty not to violate Belgium, and treaties have been regarded more lightly than ever since that war.
You might almost say that solemn international pacts nowadays are little more than polite gestures.

There is, however, a practical fact that lends credence to such a treaty as this, between a big power and a little power. If Germany wants to attack France or England, now or hereafter, she doesn't need to march through Belgium. The first onslaught, at least, would be by air. We don't notice any of the powers hurrying to bind themselves not to fly over other countries.

Two's Company

The Characters
Nina, a nice girl with hazel hair, has fallen in love with her stepfather.
Richard, the charming, welltattooed stepfather, is openly attentive to Nina.
Honey, Nina's gay, plump, youthful mother, is crazy about her new husband.
David, a young auto salesman, adores Nina and has urged her to marry him.
—Gladys is Nina's closest friend.

Chapter 15

Horseface's Advice

DAVID left that night before dinner, refusing Horseface's offer of further hospitality with an easy grace. But before he went, he managed a word alone with Nina.
"I've not finished with you yet, young lady," he warned her.
"When you kiss 'em, they stay kissed, my darling. More anon."

"More—kisses?"
"You bet. And wooings, and a betrothal... and maybe a diamond-chip engagement ring, that you'll actually be able to see... if you look hard enough and use a magnifying glass."

"David, you agreed that I hadn't committed myself."

"I said 'maybe,' didn't I?"

"But certainly more kisses."

"I said 'you bet,' didn't I?"

"Thank you, for doing what you did, David."

But he only said: "Oh... Nina..."

...and turned away, abruptly.

She watched him walk down the hall, a little stiffly. There was a little cross of white court-plaster, where the blood had trickled out from his temple.

For some reason, Nina's eyes filled with tears.

One Of Those Scenes?

IN February, Aunt Carrie (Horse-face) Van Alstyne had a little talk with Nina. She had sent for her, and they were having tea in her extremely moderne apartment. There were chairs made of chromium plated tubes and silvered leather. There were black satin hangings and black glass tables, and everything that wasn't black or silver was green. Definitely green... You had to be careful what you gave Aunt Carrie.

Aunt Carrie thought it was all a huge joke, particularly the arty young man who had done it for her.

"Don't I look absurd in this place?" she had asked at her housewarming... and she did. But then, Aunt Carrie looked a little absurd, anyway, anywhere... so it didn't make much difference.

She was a tall, thin woman, a little older than Honey, but she never gave a thought to clothes—usually accepting the garments sales-ladies hung on her, and walking out with them.

Her greatest talents were a superficial sophistication that covered an extremely warm and simple heart... and a flair for getting the most possible fun out of life.

Today, however, she was unduly serious.

"Nina, my dear, this is going to have to be one of those little talk-ings that are called (loathsome expression) 'woman to woman.'"

Nina began to feel uneasy, but she took a deep breath and said she was ready.

"It's about our mutual concern, Honey." Now Nina began to grow hot, all over. "Get this clear in your head first, child. I think her marriage is a grand thing; but just at this point I think it needs a little —supervising."

Was this going to be like one of those scenes you see on the stage, with each character knowing exactly what the other means, and yet talking in paraboles?

"I've noticed a very slight change in Richard lately," Carrie went on, "and I think I know what's the trouble. You can help me nip it in the bud, Nina, if you will."

Oh, it was going to be one of those scenes. So Horseface knew it all, did she? Nina thought it was a miracle that "everyone hadn't noticed" it. Or maybe she had.
Things had reached a stage where it was impossible for Nina not to realize that Richard was tremendously attracted to her... he made no effort to disguise it, and she supposed that if anything had pulled the wool over people's—Honey's—eyes, it was his very openness.

Some nights when she lay sleepless from thinking about it, she thought that her stepfather himself must be unaware of his feeling for her, and some nights, particularly when she was worn out with conflicting emotions, she thought that he was being diabolically clever. You couldn't pin anything on him; if he took his coffee up to her room in the morning, he announced it beforehand; when he kissed her, he kissed her in front of Honey, if he was holding her hand when his wife came in, he

All this could be interpreted in two ways, and Nina, loving him, preferred to think that he was not —deliberate. It made him a nicer person. It made her feel like a nicer person... if anything could, these days.

But Carrie was saying something that startled her.

Your mother is so completely out of her head about him, that she has reverted to her schooldays.
I haven't seen such fawning over a man since I made a fool of myself falling in love with my biology professor... I fell out of love with him, incidentally, when he practically drooled at the mouth with delight over a juicy ox eye... but that is neither here nor there, is it?

But it certainly was. Good old juicy ox eye. Horseface was evidently on the wrong track.

"It's entirely to his credit, of course," Carrie continued, "that Richard is the finished product he is. You and I both know that he must have had a great many women in love with him, Nina, and frankly, I think he's getting a touch fed up with Honey's—adu-latory—begin to be funny."

"My thought was, that if you would help me persuade your mother to accompany me on a little trip south, it would give Richard a bit of a breathing spell."

It ceased to be funny—immediately.

She said quickly: "I think, Horse—er, Aunt Carrie..."

"Go on, say it. Say 'Horse-face.'"

"I think, darling, that you are on the wrong track. I mean, I think you're mistaken. I mean I think everything's just fine."

But Horseface had the bit between her teeth.

"Well, you're crazy if you do," she said, in no uncertain terms; and she said: "A little lemon?" as though it were: "A little arsenic."

"Aunt Carrie, dear, here's the thing: you only see them at intervals, I'm with them all the time.
Don't you really think I'm more in a position to see what's going on, than you?"

Carrie frowned. "Not necessarily. Don't you know the way it is when a person's getting bald? He sees it and tends it every day, and thinks he's getting along fine. It takes an outsider to come along and tell him how much he's really lost."

'I'd Be Lost'

MRS. Van Alstyne's mild, humorous face was no longer a friendly, amusing thing, to Nina.
It had assumed dragon proportions.

Nina said: "Please don't think me rude, Aunt Carrie, or maybe I am... but I do ask you to leave this to me... Not to meddle."

Dragon-face was not in the least put out.

"I've always meddled in Honey's life—for the best, Nina; and I always shall. You simply don't want your mother to go away... You're less mature than I thought, dear child. Some crumpets?"

"No!" Nina was getting excited.
"How ridiculous for you to say I don't want Honey to go away! Let them both go away, that's a thought... A change for them both. That would fix it."

Carrie sighed.

"This isn't getting us anywhere, baby. I'm not going to abuse your mother, but if I can persuade her to go away with me for a few weeks, I shall certainly do so. I'm sorry we can't see eye to eye about this. Now let's talk about something else." Presently Nina left, and in half an hour she was talking to Honey.

All the way home she had thought: "I'd be lost!" "I'd be sunk!" "I'd lose my head, surely, surely!" "She can't leave us alone together!"

"Honey, dear, please don't say I said anything about it, but Aunt Carrie mentioned something about wanting you to go south with her the other day... just you. You wouldn't it, would you, darling?" It would be an awfully dirty trick to Richard. Why, you're still a bride!

She waited in an agony of suspense for her mother's reply.

But Honey was noncommittal.

"Why, I don't know, baby... maybe she changed her mind; she hasn't said anything to me yet.
We'll see."

The next day, Honey brought up the subject again, herself.

"You know, I'm rather considering that trip idea. Nina, Richard and I, we might just as well looked a bit peaked." She paused, and then went on, anxiously: "Do you think I look peaked, baby? Do you?"

Nina suddenly imagined that her mother did... although it was probably just that Honey was nervous about the thought... she was always so passionately anxious to look blooming for Richard.

"Why, I hadn't noticed it, Honey, dear. But I certainly wouldn't leave him, even if I did go away for a while. Take him with you!
I think he'd have every right to feel hurt..."

She simply had to let it go at that.

A newspaper tells of a small merchant, when asked why he didn't advertise, answered: "I wouldn't advertise once last summer because I didn't have the business I didn't have." It's something similar to the merchant's opinion: "Not more advertising for me," he said. "I did it once and sold out near all of my stock. It made my store look terrible. . . . The one who thinks tops then is the man who said he didn't want to advertise special sales because it brought so many people to his store he couldn't wait on the customers."

Son—Pa, what are another? Well, I am one of your sons and your grandfather is another.

Son—Then why do people brag about them?

A couple of men out in Iowa were discussing the recent drought. The drought sure made the wheat short this year," remarked one of them.

"Short?" exclaimed the other. "No, I had to lather mine to grow it."

Fred—I suppose your baby is fond of you?

Jack—No, he isn't. Why the baby never sleeps all day long is in at work so he can stay up all night and enjoy my company.

It's even itself up pretty well. It's of us have relatives we are ashamed of, and we also have relatives who are ashamed of us.

Agent—Why do you want fire insurance on your husband? That's not his help when your husband passes away.

Young Bride—It's so much cheaper and you see I intend to have him cremated.

Another reason why romance lasted longer in the old days was that a bride looked much the same after washing her face.

It is always wise to provide for the future.

Pat—Has young Spendmore anything saved up to prepare for his coming marriage?

Mike—Yes, he has a white shirt that goes with a dress suit.

Did you ever hear about the short-minded prof who fell in the boiling and sank twice before he remembered he could swim?

Sights And Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—To find bewildered people in Hollywood is easy. Practically everyone is bewildered, because all Hollywood is that way either from a lack of fortune or complete lack of it. But when it comes to the most bewildered person in this bewildered town, that's a tough one to answer—unless you ask the question right now. Have you asked it? Then the answer is: Sigrid Gurie.

No movie fan has ever recognized her, few have heard of her, and even in Hollywood not one person in a hundred knows she's the luckiest of newcomers.

Mrs. Gurie, a few months ago just a pretty blonde who traveled to work in buses, brought her lunch with her and hurried home nights to cook, wash clothes and clean house, today has finished her first leading role in pictures. And her first leading role—truly her first role—was opposite Gary Cooper in a super-super called "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Shunned Photographers

Sigrid has been in Hollywood a year, but she knows little of it. It's a plot, of course. Samuel Goldwyn, who signed her, ordered her to stay home nights, to avoid interviews, to shun photographers. Goldwyn, probably because he had over-publicized another foreign discovery named Anna Sten to no good end, had decided on the opposite extreme for Gurie.

Two months ago she was called from her "retreat" and put to work. She kept on using the public bus as a means of transportation—and each morning she was the only girl aboard who knew that Sigrid Gurie had a date at the studio to make love to Cooper.

Still Avoids Crowds

She preferred the bus to driving because Los Angeles traffic overwhelmed her. Just lately her father—reading in a Norwegian paper that she was a bus-rider—sent her a new coupe and she's tentatively driving that.

She still stays away from previews, picture shows, and public appearances generally. Ask her how she likes Hollywood and she replies, with a whimsical smile: "How should I know what Hollywood is?"

She does her own housework to fill in her spare time under the Goldwyn "hidden flower" plot, and her other pastimes are planting flowers and trying to tune in Norway on her great, extra-large, multi-wave radio. She has never seen either of her Scandinavian fellows, Sonja Henie or Greta Garbo. She would like to.

COMFORTER MEN

PLAN ACTIVITIES

A special evening church service and the announcement of the date of the annual minstrel show to be December 8 and 9, were the main topics considered by the Men's Club of the Reformed Church of the Comforter, meeting last night in the church basement.

The church service which will be sponsored by the men will probably take place sometime in December with the men having complete charge of the service.

The annual minstrel show is again under the direction of Frank Elmendorf who promised in his report to the club, that this year's production would be "quite different."

The newly organized Glee Club, formed of members of the Men's Club, sang several selections after the meeting.

The highest inhabited house in Europe is the Mr. Elina Observatory, 9,075 feet above sea level.

HEM AND AMY

The World Of Stamps

By James B. Hatcher

Erin's Saint

Calpurnius, a Roman officer, had a son named Patrick who converted Ireland to Christianity in the fifth century and became patron saint of Erin.

His figure appears on the Irish Free State's three new high value stamps: 2 shillings 6 pence green, 5-sh brown violet, 10-sh dark blue.

These prints—Irish stamps replace the British overprints which the Free State has been using since its creation in 1922.

The design—by R. J. King—symbolizes the Christian renaissance in Ireland, attended by acolytes. St. Patrick is shown with outstretched hands invoking God's blessing on the supernatural light denoted by the flame of the Paschal fire ascending from his feet. The frame incorporates an outline of the Bell shrine of St. Patrick, an eleventh century structure.

As a youth of 16, Patrick was seized by raiders, taken to Ireland and sold as a slave. He herded swine in Antrim for six years before escaping to Gaul. He studied, became a bishop and returned to Ireland in 432 to preach the Gospel of Christ.

Many miraculous stories are told of Patrick's fight against the Druids' faith and their age-old pagan customs. At Tara, the ancient capital, he narrowly escaped execution and composed his famous Llorica, or hymn of protection. Taking a shamrock from the green sod, he used it to explain the Trinity. Idols fell at his approach, and his miracles impressed the pagans.

For 61 years St. Patrick preached, converted and baptized. He died March 17, 493.

Latvia's Dictator

In 1909 the University of Nebraska conferred a bachelor of science degree on a Latvian.

His name was Karlis Ulmanis. Today he is president, premier and dictator of Latvia. His nation celebrated his 60th birthday on September 4 by issuing a set of nine stamps bearing his portrait.

Because of his activities in Latvia's independence movement—the Letts were trying to break away from Russia—Ulmanis found it wise to come to America. He was already a trained agriculturist, so he studied further in his field.

He worked in a Lincoln, Neb., dairy, then made cheese in Texas, returning to Riga in 1913.

Ulmanis became Latvia's first prime minister in 1918. Since then he has been premier in eight cabinets, sometimes carrying the foreign minister's portfolio too. He is a large man, with tremendous energy. Lettish newspapers call him "Leader."

Colors and values of the Ulmanis set are: 3-shillings orange, 5-s yellow green, 10-s dark green, 20-s red violet, 25-s black violet, 30-s blue, 35-s indigo, 40-s brown, 50-s olive gray. It is a comparatively small issue, only 100,000 complete sets being released.

Roosevelt on Collecting

"The stamp hobby pays rich dividends both as a diversion and as a broadener of one's horizon, and the best of it is that one's interest, far from flagging, increases with the years," said President Roosevelt in wishing success to the National Stamp exhibition at Rockefeller Center, New York (October 2-10). The President sent a selection of covers from his collection for exhibition.

At a meeting last evening at the Hotel Governor Clinton the Colonial City Stamp Club members discussed at length plans for the forthcoming two-day exhibit to be held at the hotel on Friday afternoon and evening of November 5, and all during Saturday, the 6th.

It is indicated that this showing of philatelic material will be without doubt the most elaborate ever attempted by the local club. Approximately 100 frames, three feet by two feet in size, will house the exhibit, which will consist of rare and picturesque stamps from all over the world.

Interesting to many will be the early stamps of this country. Many of these are on the original envelopes and show Star, Numeral, Colored and fanciful cancellations, applied by the postmasters of long ago. Such practices are no longer tolerated by the postal authorities.

Visitors will be welcomed at the display booth. A generous supply of stamp publications will be distributed free, likewise the price

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of fluid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink. Laxatives are only makeshifts. A more bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. See

Seek To Lower Insurance Rates In Ulster County

Bruyn Hasbrouck of New Paltz, a member of the Ulster County Insurance Agents' Association, was the principal speaker Tuesday evening at the monthly meeting of the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association held in New Paltz, where the firemen were the guests of the New Paltz fire department. The November meeting will be in Kohnkonson.

Mr. Hasbrouck spoke of the efforts being made to have the insurance rates in Ulster county placed in Class A, instead of being left in the second classification as at present, and urged the cooperation of the firemen in obtaining the new rating which would result in the lowering of fire insurance rates in the county.

At the close of Mr. Hasbrouck's address the association unanimously went on record as approving the action being taken to obtain a higher rating or classification for Ulster county, and a committee was appointed to work in cooperation with the county's insurance brokers.

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy of Kingston discussed the mutual aid plan which the association was working to place in effect in the county. In brief the plan provided that when another town called on the adjoining town for aid in fighting a fire that one of the other town's nearest fire companies would cover the town responding to the call so that it would not be left without fire protection in case a fire broke out. In connection with this plan all of the fire departments in the county are being asked to send in to the committee a list of all fire fighting equipment in each town in the county. This information will then be furnished to each fire department. It is expected that the adoption of this mutual aid plan will assist in obtaining lower insurance rates in Ulster county.

The winners in the essay contest sponsored by the association were announced. The subject assigned had been "Fire Prevention in the Home," and first prize of $5 was awarded to John L. Brown of Ellenville, second prize of $3 to Thelma DuBois of Port Jervis, and third prize of $2 to Reginald Isaacs of High Falls. The contest was limited to school children outside of the city. The judges in the contest were Chief Murphy, Chief C. G. A. Fisher of Ellenville and George Hammesphar of W. H. K. I.

Following the meeting entertainment was furnished by Normal School pupils and George Oats sang several solos. Refreshments were then served and a social hour followed.

The association also adopted unanimously a resolution calling on the government to deport all criminal aliens in the country, and once they have been deported to refuse to allow them to re-enter this country.

Students Pay Visit To Supreme Court To See Procedure

There was a rather unusual diversion at the opening of Supreme Court this morning, with Justice Harry E. Schirick presiding, when the legal atmosphere of the courtroom was lightened and brightened by the appearance on the scene of 85 students of the Lawrence Van den Berg Training School at New Paltz, accompanied by a number of their teachers. Two buses brought the young people to Kingston, who made the trip for the purpose of securing first hand information and impressions on the methods of court procedure.

Shortly after the opening of court Charles R. O'Connor, deputy county clerk, who was acting as clerk of the court, at the direction of Judge Schirick, explained to the students the working of the court calendar and how cases were brought to trial.

Mr. O'Connor told how the attorneys filed with the county clerk a note of issue, containing data of the actions to be brought, from which the entire calendar of pending cases was made up and printed. He went on to explain that a week before the opening of court attorneys met with the clerk and the calendar was called in order to determine the state of readiness of the various cases.

At the opening of court there was a further call of the cases and from those announced ready for trial a dozen or so were placed upon what is known as the day calendar, to be taken up for trial at once. Another list of perhaps 25 cases is placed on an "alarm calendar" and the attorneys are notified to be ready in case their action is taken off the alarm calendar and placed on the regular day calendar to be tried when reached.

Judge Schirick then announced that the first case of the day, No. 168, a negligence action would be taken up. Before doing so he explained to the students that this case had been on trial Tuesday and the taking of testimony concluded. He said that the attorneys would proceed to sum up the testimony for their respective clients, the judge would charge the jury and then the jury would retire for deliberation to determine the facts in the case and decide who, in their opinion, was right and who was wrong.

The case in which summation was had this morning was the action brought by Alice L. Costello of this city against Hazel L. Cook and another of New Paltz. The plaintiffs in the action were represented by Attorneys Robert G. Groves and Harry H. Flemming. Turner & Murphy of Albany appeared for the defendants.

The action results from an auto accident at Tilton's Four Corners November 13, 1936, on Route 32. The accident occurred as plaintiff's car, driven by David Freer, Jr., was crossing Route 32. Defendant's car, driven by herself but owned by her father, Thomas Elliott of New Paltz, was being driven on Route 32 from New Paltz to Kingston.

Plaintiff asked damages in the sum of $283, but defendant had filed a counter claim asking for $234.70.

Suggests Possible Date of Picture

Editor of Freeman.
Dear Sir:
In your issue of October 14, I noticed the picture of "Wall Street" and the item relative to the possible date of it.
This fact may be of some assistance:
I have under date of 1871 advertisements of the firm names appearing on these buildings as follows: J. O. Merrill, Brodhead & Co., and another which I copy in full: Peter E. Jansen, wholesale and retail dealer in drugs and medicines, perfumery, paints and oils, dye stuffs, chemicals, glassware, etc. Corner of North Front and Wall street, Kingston, N. Y.

Another reader: Sahler, Reynolds & DuBois, wholesale and retail hardware and powder dealers, Wall, corner N. Front.
My mother, who is 88 years old, distinctly recalls the purchase of powder there in 1872 by my father, who was engaged in the blue-stone business.

Trusting this may be of interest to you,
MRS. GARRETT BENNETT,
Phoenixia, N. Y.

Bodies of Plane Dead Are Claimed

Salt Lake City, Oct. 20 (AP)—Relatives and airline officials claimed the bodies of the 19 victims of Sunday night's tragic plane crash today and the coroner returned a verdict of "death by accident."

Sixteen passengers and the crew of three died when a United Airlines "Mainliner" smashed against a mountainside. Throughout the night relatives of the victims visited a crowded mortuary in the southwestern Wyoming town of Evanston, identified bodies and arranged for their transportation to homes over the nation.

SOGLOW CARTOONS FEATURE OF NEW RICHFIELD ADS
O. Soglow, famous cartoonist of the New Yorker, Saturday Evening Post, Collier's and other popular magazines, and creator of the "Little King" and "Sentinel Louie" in the Sunday comics, has been commissioned by the Richfield Oil Corp. of New York to develop a series of humorous cartoons for its fall and winter advertising on Richfield Hi-Octane Gasoline and Richlube "All-Weather" Motor Oil. The new advertisements will be a regular feature of this paper until Christmas bringing to our readers twice a week the work of this brilliant cartoonist.

For his comedy situations Mr. Soglow has chosen for his subject the main problem of the average motorist in winter—quick starting. He has shown the various difficulties encountered by such motorists as only he can create and how they were solved once Richfield Hi-Octane gasoline was put in the tank. It so happens that Mr. Soglow's cartoons have plenty of basis in fact. Advertisers as being "rich" because it comes from a Richfield, Richfield Hi-Octane gasoline has exceptional quality-starting qualities and offers the highest anti-knock rating available without any premium in price.

MAKE YOUR PARTY A RIOT OF FUN WITH NEW GAMES AND STUNTS

Mystic Circles a Gay Fortune Game

Something doing every minute when the popular Warners give a party. Right now Mystic Circles are revealing the future—and excitement rides high.

Just what are mystic circles? You draw three rings on the floor with chalk or make three big circles out of cardboard. Number 1, 2, 3 as the picture shows.

To get the spell to work, the girls must dance around the circles and sing a love song. Then each girl, blindfolded, tries to jump into the circle she desires.

Suppose Susie lands right in Circle 1. The crowd cheers. "Wedding bells soon for Susie!" If she jumps in Circle 2, she's going to have money, in Circle 3, her dearest wish comes true. If she misses the circles? Then the fates haven't yet decided about Susie.

Another secret of successful parties—start your guests doing something as they trickle in. Introduce them to "Sniff." Have bottles ready—filled with liquids that look alike but smell differently. Such as cherry vinegar, coffee, molasses and water. Blindfold each guest and let him sniff each bottle. What will you write down his guesses? For the funniest—give a comic prize.

Then, when everybody's come, break the ice with a jolly team game—stretch two lengths of tape across the floor. Have the girls line up singly at it, in two teams. The first team to push a penny down the tape—with their noses—is the hilarious winner.

From our "Party" booklet, GAMES FOR CROWDS. This is for your party. It has 100 fun games, fortune tellers, riddles, music, stunts to try, your guests happy and you all popular hostess.

Send 15c for our booklet, "GAMES FOR GOOD PARTIES," to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 100 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

The dinner in his honor will be held at the Governor Clinton Hotel at promptly 7 o'clock.

Delegations are expected from Schenectady, Albany, Troy, Newburgh, Middletown, Long Island and New York city.

The bluest job Coach Jimmy Crowley has at Fordham this fall is to find a replacement for Andy Palau at quarter.

"It will take at least two men to fill Andy's job and I'll tell you why," said the Ram coach.
 "He wasn't called 'Handy Andy' for nothing.
 That kid did everything for us. He called the plays, blocked, kicked and passed. That's why I say I need at least two men to replace him."

"We haven't a man among the backfield candidates who boasts such versatility. A few of the lads can do two things fairly well. But in most instances they are limited to one. Joe Wolkoski, for example, is our best blocker but Joe doesn't come up to specifications in running or passing.
 There isn't a triple threat on the squad, much less a lad capable of quadruple duties."

"What we are trying to do is fit in a quarterback who can think and block. That will take care of two Palau assets—if we find the lad who qualifies. Then we'll try to fit in a left half who can run and pass. That should cover the other qualifications. Of course, both of these positions will have to be manned by players who can defend against a pass. That sounds like a large order and it is.

"We have a couple of quarterbacks here, George McKnight and Butch Fontana. McKnight has plenty of experience and if he'll only learn not to fumble at the wrong time, he may do. He's a fair blocker and passer—no Palau—but fair. Fortunately has fine possibilities, but he lacks experience."

"You can't count Wolkoski out for the left halfback berth. Al Gurske is a savage tackler and a fine defender against passes, but his running and passing are not up to par. Johnny Beane, a junior, is another lad who may step into the job."

Fordham was sorely in need of a good, shifty half-carrier last year. It looks as if the Rams are in the same predicament this season.

Colonials Open Season Tonight Against Hakoahs

FLOOR CAPTAIN TONIGHT

The old Kingston standby, Carlo Husta, who started his professional basketball career in Kingston more than 12 years ago, and has been a favorite here ever since, will direct the Colonials as floor captain tonight when they tangle with Honey Russell's Hakoahs at the municipal auditorium. Husta, who is a full time resident of Kingston now, has taken more interest than ever in the club this season and hopes to pilot it to the American League championship in collaboration with Pop Morgenweck.

A full house is expected to greet the Kingston Colonials when they trot out on the court at the municipal auditorium tonight, for their exhibition basketball game with Honey Russell's Hakoahs of New York.

Reserved seats have been selling at an encouraging rate, reports Frank Morgenweck, manager of the locals, and talk among bleacher customers indicates that there will be a jam on the rush seats.

Tonight's contest and next Wednesday's duel with the Original Renaissance are two tuneups for the American League Basketball opening on Wednesday, November 3, against the Jersey Reds.

"I hope we can take the two exhibitions," said Morgie to sports writers. "I think we'll make a good showing by the way things have gone in practice. I'm hot after that American pennant, and I want the Colonials to start winning right away."

Morgie feels jovial since his workouts started, and even feels better physically. "It does my heart good to see the way the boys are showing up in practice, all of them, the veterans and the newcomers."

Moe Duhler, the Hebrew husky Mangle brought out of New York, looks like one of the best prospects among the new talent. Moe has all that one could ask for, weight, speed, a shifty style and what is most essential a good shooting eye.

"Look at him sink those shots," smiled Morgie as he watched him work yesterday.

Kingston's veterans, Stanton, Rablin, Husta, Hearn and Jimmy Brown will be the starters tonight; Morgie has announced. In the second period he will give the fans a look at Duhler, Sammy Stein, Alie Shuckman, Chick Halpern and the other newcomers.
 For the third frame, there will be a combination of oldsters and new talent.

Starting time of the game is 9:15 o'clock. The preliminary will be at 7:30 between the Battery A and West Point Quartermasters Corps.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP).— Coach Otto Solem continued today his program of easy drills for the Syracuse University football team and he gave it just enough of a workout to keep it in condi-

Solem regards Maryland as one of the toughest opponents on the Syracuse schedule.

Jack Hinkle will be ready for the southern trip and is expected to see some action, although Wilson's slight injury probably will get a major share of the work.

Solem put the team through new formations, Maryland run-wingback, calling for a change in the Syracuse tactics.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By CLAUDE R. JAGGER

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—The stock market strode ahead with strength today as traders recovered further from their fright of yesterday's collapse.

Prices were bid up 1 to as much as 7 points or more at their best during mid-afternoon, but the irresolute behavior of U. S. Steel and other leaders stimulated profit selling which cut down gains in some sectors.

Transactions ran at the rate of around 4,500,000 shares.
Trading was more orderly than Tuesday, although a burst of activity in early dealings put the ticker tape about six minutes behind the market. It caught up by mid-day.

Confusing to traders, financial men said, were reports on the character of buying. Some said it came from strong Wall Street interests, other disagreed.

Sterling performance much of the time were General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Case, du Pont, American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Can,

Westinghouse, Allied Chemical,
Santa Fe, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Union Carbide, Nash Kelvintor, Continental Can and Eastman Kodak.

Consensus was that now the market had regained its poise, neither the securities and exchange commission nor the administration would soon shift ground on the "hands-off" policy. Freely discussed was the possibility that the break of shares might prompt Washington to reexamine tax laws relating to both stock deals and general business for possible adjustment by Congress at its November 15 session.

7,290,000 Shares
Sold on Tuesday

Following the heavy selling and drastic declines, which were general, in stocks Monday, there was an ominous tone to the market at the opening Tuesday as many issues were dumped on the market at heavy losses from the closing prices of Monday. An example was Nash motors, which closed at 10 Monday, but opened Tuesday, late, at five, coming back to 9 1/2 by 12:15 and closing at 9 1/2.

A result of the sharp break Monday, was one of the factors in the heavy liquidation in the early hours of trading yesterday, with blocks of 5,000 to 10,000 shares changing hands shortly after the opening and later, as liquidation progressed the ticker showing sales of as many as 20,000 shares in some of the lower-priced issues.

About 2 o'clock Tuesday a substantial rally got under way, the recovery becoming more extensive in the closing half hour, with some issues closing from five to nine points above the day's low points.

The wide swings in values during the day is shown by the fact that the Dow-Jones industrial average at one time went up to 127.60, reached a low of 125.83, but closed the day at 126.85, up 1.12 points for the day over Monday at 125.73, off 0.46 points for the day. Utilities closed at 19.65, off 0.19 point for the day.

Bond transactions on the Stock Exchange amounted to $20,710,- 000 highest since March 17 last.
Corporate bonds showed the largest average net loss in years, but closed well above the day's lows. Government bonds were weak and ended the day with losses up to 25-32.

Sales for the day totaled 7,- 290,000 shares, largest since July 21, 1933, 2,210,000 shares being dealt in the first hour. Number of issues traded in set a new high record at 1,046 and 928 issues set new lows for the year. On the Curb Exchange 1,632,000 shares were traded in, which is also the largest since July, 1933.

In Washington officials, in-guarded comments on yesterday's market, "hands off" policy regarding the market justified. Their greatest concern seemed to be in somehow preventing the stock and bond market reaction from spreading out into the general fields of production and trade, where unsettlement, but not actual crisis is said to be prevailing.

Representatives O'Connor of New York and Sabbath of Illinois and T. R. Benson, president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, advocated alterations in market regulation. President Roosevelt declined to comment on the drop.

Many companies reporting for the September 30 quarter continued to show net earnings. National Biscuit earned 46 cents a common share compared with 61 cents in the 1936 quarter; United Biscuit, 54 cents, vs. 87 cents; Houge Sound $2.20, vs. $1.32; Youngstown Sheet & Tube $2.02, vs. $1.79; Continental Steel, $1.08, vs. 14 cents; Certainteed, four cents, vs. three cents; General Cigar, 90 cents, vs. $1.00; Corn Products refining, nine cents vs. $1.01; Container Corp., 54 cents vs. 62 cents; Remington Rand, 45 cents, vs. four cents; Owens-Illinois Glass, $4.08 (for 12 months ended September 30) vs. $3.62.

Broad Buying Hits
Market Today

eral Reserve Board, plus lessons learned in 1929, and a leaner purse, had operated to thin out the rank and file of the speculative army which in other years might have been expected to answer the lure of rising prices.

How the speculative capitalistic captains of the money street fared the last two months was a matter of conjecture.

Rumors of Plungers

Rumors—unverified—in trading circles recently have revived names of some of the plungers in the 1929-32 declines as sellers on the bear side, although brokers have complained the federal capital gains tax discouraged large-scale short-term operations by making part or most of the winnings payable to the U. S. treasury as income taxes. Some old time big traders insisted that they had merely become "longtime investors" and coupon clippers since the S. E. C. took control of the stock market.

At the same time there have been vague stories of an "Amsterdam bear crowd," selling American stocks abroad to escape the watchful eye of Uncle Sam's police force.

While many new things under Wall Street's sun have come to pass since 1929, mainly from Washington, brokers saw the old tradition of the big man selling while the little fellow buys carried out recently. This time the S. E. C. provided concrete data to support what in other declines had been largely observations of brokers.

Rise in Buying.

Persistently since the securities commission last June started publishing weekly and daily figures on purchases and sales of stocks in less than the standard 100-share units the buying has outweighed the selling. The buying surplus tended to rise substantially on the wide breaks since Labor Day.

Analysts took this as an indication the so-called "public"—as distinguished from large investors and capitalistic interests—was buying and "bargain-hunting."

Many small bargain hunters in the 1929-32 decline came out well, even at present prices.
Whether the little bargain hunters of 1937 would ring the bell again remained to be answered after the market emerges from the present storm.

Much timely information on the preserving of tomato products is contained in a brief popular corular just published by the State Experiment Station at Geneva under the authorship of Dr. C. S. Federation, who has been making extensive studies of factors affecting the keeping qualities of tomato products. The circular treats of canning, chutney, sauce, Thousand Island Dressing, canned tomatoes, tomato juice, tomato juice cocktail, and tomato pulp or puree. A copy of the circular may be obtained upon request to the Sta-
